The first meeting of the City Council in the new year was held last Monday evening, all members answering the roll call, and Mayor H. H. Smith presiding.

A blasting permit for quarrying purposes was asked by the Market Street Railway Company, for a period of one year, beginning February 1, affecting their quarry east of Mission street, near the top of the hill. The permit was granted.

An amendment to Ordinance No. 160, regulating traffic upon the public streets of Daly City, having to do principally with the placing of arterial stop signs, was read for the first time.

A resolution granting authority to the county of San Mateo to include certain territory, public ways, public streets and right of ways within the boundaries of this city, in the proposed Colma sewers maintenance district, and consenting to the doing of work thereon, was read.

On account of the resignation of Councilman T. P. Moran and the appointment of Julius Twesten to fill the vacancy, the different committees on the board were rearrange as follows:

The street committee reported that action will be taken by the San Francisco board of supervisors at their next meeting to clean their part of the Scenic boulevard of refuse, as it is in a very unsanitary condition. This boulevard runs from Wellington avenue, Daly City, over the hill to Geneva avenue, San Francisco. The San Francisco board's attention was drawn to this matter by our chairman of the street committee, who was inspecting the Daly City portion of the boulevard, which was found to be in a good, clean condition.

The street committee also reported that the storm sewers throughout the city are in excellent condition, and have successfully carried off the surface water during the recent heavy rains.

He has titled his main topic as "Some of the Things I Learned While in the Heart of Chicago's Slum District." Sub-topics: (1) "Is Chicago Really as Bad as She is Painted to be?" FIREMEN HOSTS AT A TURKEY DINNER

Last Saturday evening the firemen of Station No. 1 entertained their wives and a few honored guests at their new home, on Santa Barbara avenue, with a delightful turkey dinner, with all the trimmings.

After spending about two hours at the table, the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to music furnished by Miss Nakel and Tom Mitchell, accordion players.

Captain Ernest Lewis greeted the guests with appropriate words of welcome and introduced Commissioner Gus Schenk, who was the speaker of the evening. Commissioner Schenk, in his usual jovial way, informed the guests that they were to make themselves at home and simply enjoy a night at the fire house, which from the appearance of things, they surely did.

Al. Green and Emile Nessier, better known as "Spott," were the able waiters.

During the course of the dinner Commissioner Schenk arose to thank several friends in behalf of Station No. 1. First, Mr. Edward Freyer, who so kindly made the beautiful charter which holds a conspicuous place on the walls. Next, Mr. Fred Michelsen, who made the beautiful frame that surrounds it; Mrs. Peter Dormoy, for the beautiful American flag that hangs on the wall, and last, but not least, the Captain's wife, Mrs. E. Lewis, for the lovely curtains she made for the windows and donated to the station.

The evening will long be remembered by the following: Chief and Mrs. J. J. Kennedy, Assistant Chief and Mrs. Fritz Hanson, Assistant Chief and Mrs. Andrew Chesney, Mr. and Mrs. E. Freyer, Mr. and Mrs. F. Michelsen, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Krase, of Burlingame, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Green, Captain and Mrs. A. Harman, Treasurer A. Romer, Marshal and Mrs. L. Shaw, Fireman and Mrs. P. Dormoy, Fireman and Mrs. Herschel, Fireman R. Kramer, Fireman and Mrs. W. Sunderland, and Fireman and Mrs. L. De Vencenzi.

SKYLINE BOULEVARD BEING RESURFACED

The resurfacing of the Skyline boulevard in San Mateo county has resulted in covering this road with six inches of gravel, six miles north of the Crystal Springs Country Club.

Extreme care is necessary in driving over this strip of road, and wherever possible it should be avoided until construction work is completed. During the next six weeks it is expected that the piece of road between the Crystal Springs Golf Club and the Tanforan road will be torn up in short stretches at a time and covered with a thick layer of loose gravel.

Motorists wishing to use this road should communicate with the touring bureau of the California State Automobile Association for reports on the progress of this work.

JEFFERSON WINS AND LOSES GAME

Displaying an almost airtight defense, Jefferson high school's unlimited basketball team defeated the Balboa quintet, 9 to 5, last Friday on the latter's court. The Indians' 30's lost, 11-9, in the preliminary contest to Balboa high's lightweights.

The new Balboa gymnasium, with its slippery floor, did not allow exceptionaly fast play. That is probably the main reason for the low scores in both games. Jefferson was also handicapped with only one day practice since vacation.

The unlimited teams played a close game throughout with not more than four points margin at any time. The score at the end of the first half was 5 to 3 in favor of Jefferson. Andy Vireno and Jack Gibbons divided the high point honors with three counters each.

The Purple and Gold 30's scored the first basket in the initial period and continued to pile up the lead. At the intermission they were on the long end of a 9-5 score, but they were held scoreless from then on.

TENDERED SURPRISE PARTY IN HONOR OF BIRTHDAY

A delightful surprise party was given last Saturday evening in honor of Miss Mary Collins at her home on Wellington avenue. Upon entering, the guest of honor was showered with confetti, her friends wishing her a happy birthday.

The evening was spent in playing games and dancing, after which dainty refreshments were served to the following guests: Misses Mary Collins, Alice Burr, Ruth Larson, Carol Ledbetter, Geneva Lucas, Marjorie Ross and Louise Terrafaurse; Messrs. Dave Casiglia, Bill Dellauitante, Jack Dullea, Joe Kozarich, Mike Matas, Ed. Morgan and Carlos Reinhart.

BODY OF MISSING MAN DISCOVERED

The body of A. L. Le Comte, aged 42, formerly of New York, who disappeared while a patient at the Colma Sanitarium on December 8, 1929, was found last Tuesday, hanging from a tree on the Christensen Dairy farm, two miles from Colma.

Deputy Constable George Krehl announced that a thorough investigation will be made to determine if Le Comte committed suicide or was the victim of foul play.

The body, which had been hanging on the tree for at least two weeks, according to Khrel, was swinging from a tree in a part of the ranch rarely visited by the owners or ranch hands.

Le Comte leaves a wife, daughter, son and brother, Dr. J. La Comte, all residing in the east.

'MYSTERIONS RUSSIA' PRESBYTERIAN THEME

An illustrated sermon with Russia as a basis will be delivered in the Presbyterian church on Sunday evening at 7:45. Russia is a land of mystery and in order to understand Russia today it is necessary to know the historical background. A beautiful set of stereopticon slides has been secured. One striking slide will show the "King of Bells" which weighs 200 tons and is today in the city of Moscow. Pictures of the Kremlin, Russian peasants, the city of Leningrad and many other pictures will be shown. The church of Russia will be described together with its weaknesses and the reasons for its fall. This will give those interested a peculiar opportunity to know something of Russia. The slides are from the choice collection of George Kanzee of San Francisco, who is donating the use of these slides for this special occasion.

Mrs. Wood, reciprocity chairman, who so completely represents her office, cordially invited all members and officers to be present at the next district meeting to be held Friday, January 17, at Central school, San Mateo.

Mrs. C. Page, president of Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A., accompanied by two co-workers, Mrs. L. Light and Mrs. Secore, were welcome visitors and requested Crocker P. T. A. who came to request Cocker P. T. A. to associate with them in a theatre program. A committee was duly appointed.

To start the new year without some new members, the meeting would have been incomplete. The membership chairman reports the following who were gladly welcomed at this time: Mrs. R. Abbott, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. R. Cullen, Miss Del Plano, Mrs. Lewis, and Mrs. Yates. It is hoped that the new members will find lots of joy in P. T. A. work during the coming year.

Votes of thanks were received from the teachers of Crocker school and also the student body for the Christmas remembrance provided them by the P. T. A.

The teachers of Crocker school showed their co-operative spirit by meeting with the P. T. A.

After the business of the day and various speakers had made their remarks, Mrs. J. Swan and Mrs. J. Standish, hostesses of the day, had prepared something a bit unusual, but so tasty for a cold day, enchiladas and coffee, which were greatly enjoyed.

The officers feel that a most successful meeting was held, and that the new year has been started properly, and wish to thank you all for your co-operation, and want you to know that only through such co-operation can any organization be a success. Let one new year resolution be to join the P. T. A.

At the meeting of the San Mateo County board of supervisors last Monday, plans and specifications were ordered drawn for the proposed Colma sewer district, which will cost approximately $250,000, according to A. J. Scampini, San Francisco attorney, who presented the petition.

The system will link up with that of Daly City, and will include sanitary and storm sewers, an out-fall line, and a pumping plant. The sum of $725 has been appropriated for purchase of a necessary right-of-way, and R. A. Klassen appointed engineer of the work.

At the request of the San Francisco Bay Toll Bridge company, the board of supervisors approved a monthly commutation ticket to be sold bridge commutters for $25, good for a month's transportation for car and driver. The present straight rate is nearly $40.

Preliminary plans for addition of a ground-floor wing to the Community hospital at Beresford were told the board by William H. Toepke, San Mateo architect. The Wing will contain an isolation ward of eight rooms, disrobing room for patients, dietician rooms for the resident nurses, Toepke told the board.

Beyond taking the plans into consideration the board did not act, since the cost of the addition will be included in the September budget.

EASTERN STAR MEMBERS ENJOY 'WELCOME' PARTY

On January 6, Crocker Chapter No. 382, Order of the Eastern Star, got under way for 1930, and if the start may be used as an index for the year, then twelve months of progress and prosperity loom immediately ahead.

The new officers and Star Points handled their work like "one to the manner born," which is a tribute both to an earnest desire to be proficient as well as to thorough and painstaking instruction.

Worthy Matron Louise Aitchison conducted the meeting as though used to occupying her exalted station. A kindly and earnest address was made by Worthy Patron George Savage, during which he pledged the best efforts of the officers and asked the support of the membership, that the work of the Chapter might be not only of high standard, but productive of the greatest good.

After a brief business meeting, a New Year Welcome party held the attention of all through an interesting program of acting and music, after which all partook of tempting refreshments, rounding out a most enjoyable evening.

BANK OF ITALY NOW IN BILLION DOLLAR CLASS

With a gain in resources of more than $200,000,000—the largest increase ever experienced in the history of the institution—the Bank of Italy has moved into the billion dollar class, it was revealed with the recent publication of its statement of condition.

Total assets exceed $1,055,000,000, giving to California the first billion dollar bank west of the Mississippi. There are in fact only three others in the United States with equal assets—the National City Bank and Guaranty Trust Company of New York, and the Continental Illinois Bank & Trust Company of Chicago.

In the recent statement of the Bank of Italy, the greatest gain is that reflected in deposits. The figures now stand at $893,892,000, as compared with $698,00,000 at the end of last year, an increase of more than $195,000,000. Cash in hand and in banks aggregates $183,867,000, reflecting in excess of $96,000,000 above the totals twelve months ago. At the same time the volume of letters of credits, acceptances and drafts has grown from $33,000,000 to more than $40,000,000, indicating the increase in international business.

Plans were made in 1927, when the institution had approximately $600,000,000 in resources, to build the totals to a billion dollars by May 6, 1930, the sixtieth birthday of A. P. Giannini, founder of the bank. In reaching this objective nearly half a year ahead of schedule a new record has been set in bank development.

Direction of the billion dollar campaign has been under the supervision of George A. Webster, vice-president.

RAILROAD COMMISSION UPHELD IN TRUCK CASE

The California Supreme Court has again upheld the power of the Railroad Commission to punish for contempt of its orders, by denying the appeal of Thomas Keller for a writ of review of the action of the commission in fining Keller $500 for failure to obey an order of the commission to cease an illegal truck operation between San Francisco and San Jose.

The commission, upon complaint of certificated carriers, had cited Keller to appear and answer the charge that he was operating without a certificate. After a hearing the commission found that Keller was operating without a certificate, as a common carrier, and issued an order requiring him to cease and desist such illegal operation. At a subsequent hearing it was found that Keller had disobeyed the order to cease and desist, and by his own admission had not changed the character of his operations. The commission accordingly imposed a fine of $500 for contempt of its order, with an alternative of serving one day in jail in the county of Santa Clara for each $5.00 of the fine. Keller appealed to the Supreme Court on the theory that he was not operating as a common carrier, and that the evidence failed to show that he was, and therefore the contempt order was in excess of the commission's jurisdiction.

DEAD BANDIT IDENTIFIED AS SAN MATEO ROBBER

A bandit slain at San Jose during a holdup Sunday night was identified Monday as the gunman of a bandit pair which on Thursday, of last week held up two San Mateo oil stations on the Bayshore boulevad.

The dead bandit, police said, was identified as Cordes H. Ahlers, aged 24, whose parents reside at Gilroy. He had been living at a San Jose rooming house for several weeks.

Ray T. Locke, attendant at a Standard Oil station, Howard avenue and the Bayshore highway, was positive, police said, in his identification of Ahlers as the man who stepped from a coupe and held up the station shortly after 8 o'clock Thursday morning of last week.

BERESFORD PARK WILL HAVE POLICE AND FIRE STATION

In accordance with promises made to the citizens of Beresford Park at the time of the annexation election, Mayor William H. Taylor and other members of the San Mateo City Council are planning establishment of a fire house and sub-police station in that district. No definite decision as to when the sub-station can be placed in operation is possible until the mayor and the council decide upon the most feasable method of financing and organizing the new improvements.

DALY CITY THEATRE ADDS NEW SPEAKERS

The Daly City Theatre has just completed the installation of new Wright De-Costa Super Auditorium Speakers for their Colorart Synchrotone Talking Picture System. These new speakers were especially built for the sound conditions of the Daly City Theatre and serve to correct any defects that may be apparent in the presentation of sound picture plays, creating a softness in tonal coloring.

Beginning Saturday the Daly City Theatre will present a week of gala special attractions, starting Saturday with Paramount's "Fast Company," Ring Lardner's big talking comedy, with Jack Oakie, Evelyn Brent and others. For Sunday, Joan Crawford, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and a large cast of supporting players will appear in Metro Goldwyn's "Modern Maidens," the flaming sequel to "Our Dancing Daughters." Monday and Tuesday will bring Aileen Pringle in Radio Keiths Orpheum super-special, "Night Parade," while Wednesday and Thursday, Olive Borden and Ken Murray, with Morgan Farley, will appear in "Half Marriage," Radio's big all singing, talking special. Laurel and Hardy will appear on this bill in "Man o' War," a screamingly funny comedy hit. For Friday, Dolores Costello will appear in "Madonna of Avenue A," a big Warner Brothers' Vitaphone hit.

All of these attractions will play over the Colorart Synchrotone Sound System, the equipment that presents the "Talkies" with perfection of tonal quality.

FISH AND GAME NOTES

By J. H. NEUSTADT

In the early season of the year a stroll over fields and through woods will reveal to the experienced eye the nest of game birds and considerable numbers of young. But in a walk over the same territory in autumn very few mature birds will be seen.

Nature, during the nesting season, had produced the young, but what became of the birds? The answer is that to a very considerable extent a majority of the birds, while still helpless fledglings, have been the victim of natural enemies.

Certain birds and animls not only destroy vast quantities of eggs, but also prey on the young birds. As you are reading this, countless tragedies are occurring in deep woods and open fields, with nocturnal prowlers despoiling nests and slaying tiny birds. And even in the daylight hours, the slaughter goes on.

The courageous but feeble defence of her brood that the mother can offer is futile against the attacks of the cruel bills, claws and teeth of foes. A similar fate is meted out to a very high percentage of small game birds.

The list of offenders includes the crow, the red squirrel, certain kinds of hawks and owls, and other predatory birds and animals. One of the most relentless and destructive of enemies of wild game is the house cat, especially if it is semi-wild, spending most of its time in the open.

Not alone are game birds destroyed but also song birds and insectivorous species whose economic value to the farmer is beyond computation. By the killing of the birds that protect the crops of the tiller of the soil from myriad insects, the destroyers of wild life deprive agriculture of its most effective allies in the endless struggle against pests that do more than two billion dollars worth of damage annually, and which are a perpetual menace to the food supply of mankind.

BIG PROFITS SHOWN BY BANK OF ITALY

Profits of more than $24,290,000 were reported to stockholders of the Bank of Italy in the annual message of its president, Arnold J. Mount, made public Tuesday. This is equivalent to $12.14 per share on the outstanding stock.

"The year 1929 has proved the most satisfactory in the history of the bank," Mount said in his report. "This result has been obtained through the introduction of specific measures of economy, as well as though increased revenues."

The outstanding achievement of the year was the growth in deposits of more than $18,000,000, making the Bank of Italy the only billion dollar institution west of Chicago. "Under the inspiring direction of our forceful, aggressive Vice-President, George A. Webster," Mount said, "we have witnessed the attainment of this objective of truly remarkable proportions."

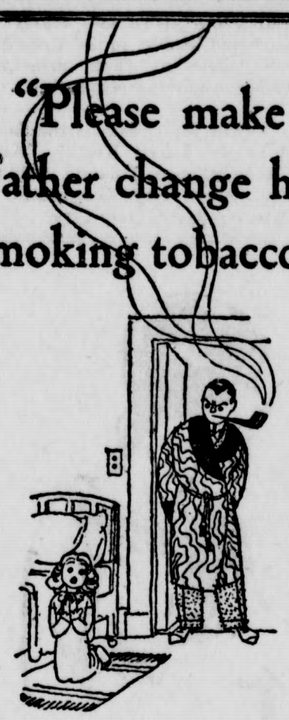
"Please make Father change his smoking tobacco"



MEN go to their graves ignorant of the suffering an over-strong pipe has caused others. But now, we trust, Father will lose no time in discovering Sir Walter Raleigh, whose mild, fragrant blend is as popular with the smoked-at, as it is delightful to the smoker. This blend of choice Burleys has plenty of body and a very special fragrance. Yet it's so mild you can smoke it all day long, with only the sensation of increasing enjoyment.

How to Take Care of Your Pipe

(Hint No. 1) Don't switch tobaccos when you break in a new pipe. Stick to the same brand for 30 or more pipefuls. Mixing tobaccos makes a pipe either strong or flat. Send for our free booklet, "How to Take Care of Your Pipe." Dept. 93, The Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation, Louisville, Ky.

CALIFORNIA NEWS BRIEFS

At a meeting of the Granada Chamber of Commerce a resolution was passed to request the Pacific Telephone Company to link up Granada phones with the Reseda exchange, south of Granada. At present, the Granada phones are served by the San Fernando office. A betterment of service is sought in the change, the resolution states. A resolution also was passed to ask the Los Angeles City Council to erect a fire station in that section. The nearest fire station is at Van Nuys, seven or eight miles away.

The Southern Pacific Company received permission from the State Railroad Commission to abandon its non-agency station at North Vallejo. Since the auto stages have replaced passenger trains running out of South Vallejo, the station has been of no value to the company, it is said. In removing it one of the old landmarks of Vallejo will be gone.

Motorists traveling over Golden State Highway, south of Bakersfield who fail to heed warnings issued by Capt. Roy Baylen's squad of "stop-and-check" traffic patrolmen, will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law. This was the announcement made by Justice of the Peace Robert Davis, before whom are brought all traffic violators taken into custody by traffic patrolmen working under jurisdiction of the California highway patrol. According to Davis, who has been enlisted by Capt. Gaylen in his crusade to prevent accidents on the thirty-two-mile straightaway, every motor vehicle operator who pleads guilty to a traffic violation charge, or who is convicted of the charge, will be fined or jailed to the limit. Announcement of the drastic plan was made following a conference in which the traffic situation south of Bakersfield was thoroughly discussed. Recently speeders on the fog-dimmed, slippery highway have been assessed approximately $10 apiece, but in the future they will receive the limit of $50; reckless drivers heretofore have escaped with a small fine, but from now on they will get the limit of $250 fine, ninety days in jail, or both, Davis said.

Seven quartz and two placer mine locations were recorded in Tuolumne County in December, bringing the total for the year to 140 quartz and 36 placer claims.

San Jose will boom in 1930, according to building projects now contemplated there. The total value of building permits, $2,467,060 for 1929, is expected to swell to $7,000,000 or more next year, according to M. C. Woodruff, city building inspector. Included in the 1930 projects are city schools, $1,180,000; Southern Pacific depot and subways, $2,000,000; two new hotels, $750,000 and $500,000; theater, $750,000, two new stores, $400,000, and more than a million dollars is expected to be expended on new residences.

Out of 130 sites originally offered, only four are now under consideration for the new prison and state hospital for the insane in Southern California, it was announced by A. R. Heron, director of finance. Location of the four sites now being considered were not divulged. Final selection will be made in a few weeks, based on recommendations of a committee.

Appropriations for a lighthouse to be built on the extreme easterly end of Anacapa Island were revealed at Ventura in a public notice received by the Postal Department asking for lighthouse bids. The work specified includes upper and lower landings, concrete stairs to and from landings; reinforced concrete retaining wall at upper landing; permanent and temporary roadways; concrete rain shed with piping system, two 50,000 gallon redwood tanks, and two complete derricks at landing platforms.

Detailed plans are being made for the Imperial County Midwinter Fair to be held at Calexico early in February. Bids have been opened and are expected to soon be awarded for construction of the main administration building, which is to be used as a permanent exhibit building after the fair is over. Exhibits are to be housed in three large tents this year. The permanent buildings will be ready for the following fair.

Bids on sixteen highway projects in California will be opened this month. Total cost of the projects will be $4,500,000—the largest volume of state highway work in any one month in the history of the California state highway system. Among the bids will be that of covering grading of 7.4 miles of the Bayshore highway from San Mateo to Redwood City.

The state Department of Public Works announced it was accepting as satisfactorily completed the contract for a graded roadbed with crushed rock surfacing on three miles of the Redwood Highway from Arcata to a point north of Mad River. The contractors, H. J. Kennedy and Daniel Bayles, bid $92,700.

The new San Jose city directory for 1930 gives San Jose a population of 77,820, an increase of 820 over the figures of last year. An increase of nearly 1000 telephones in services is noted in the directory, which places the number of new telephones in service at the beginning of the new year at 20,109. Last year's figures were 19,218.

Permission was granted by the Railroad Commission to the city of San Diego to construct Anna street at grade across the track of the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company.

The Southern Pacific Company was granted authority by the Railroad Commission to remove its passenger shelter shed at the non-agency station of Boyes Springs.

A rare and valuable tree, a white red-bud, has been received at Sequoia National Park from Bob Amyx of Niles. Amyx was formerly of Visalia. The only wild red-bud known in Tulare county grows in the Badger district, above Auckland.

The Railroad Commission granted permission to Sierra and San Francisco Power Company and Pacific Gas and Electric Company to construct and operate a water storage project estimated to cost $430,000. Applicants propose to construct a dam immediately downstream from their existing Lyons Dam, on the South Fork of the Stanislaus River, and thereby create a storage reservoir having a capacity of 5500 acre feet, in place of the present reservoir of 839 acre feet capacity.

New building totaling $509,051 was either completed or started in Martinez during 1929, according to John Briones, building inspector, who recently submitted his annual report.

A check for $181,593 was paid to the state treasurer in payment of the State Compensation Insurance Fund's premium tax for the year 1929, according to Frank J. Creede, manager of the fund. The State Compensation Insurance Fund is a self-supporting enterprise not subsidized by the state in any way, and is one of the largest taxpayers in the state. In 1928 the fund wrote more than $7,000,000 in premiums and pays the same tax as other insurance companies, Creede said.

Fresno playgrounds recently received $5000 from the estate of the late Frank Romain, to be used in building a playground for small children. The playground probably will be erected in the center of Roeding Park, at the request of the donor.

With a total value of $459,023, Vallejo building permits for 1929 exceeded those for 1928 and were within a few hundred dollars of the record set in 1927, according to the figures of Vallejo's city clerk, Alf E. Edgcumbe. The Pacific Gas and Electric Company was granted a permit amounting to $14,000 for the construction of a reinforced concrete lamp-black separator at the Maryland street plant. September stood out as the banner month of 1929, with permits totaling $74,450. March was next with $67,078.

California's state park system was virtually enriched by 6000 acres of outdoor playgrounds, ranging from virgin mountain forests to wide expanses of sandy beach. This total acreage was practically negotiated during the past year, it was reported by Fred G. Stevenot, director of natural resources, in reviewing the year's activities of the State Park Commission. Acquisition already approved by the park commission includle 40 acres of the Coronado military reservation beach lands, San Diego County; several hundred acres of virgin stands of Redwoods in Humboldt and Del Norte Counties, and the 163-acre Bliss memorial park in El Dorado County. Purchases of 4000 acres of beach land on Mission Bay, San Diego County, has also been authorized, while 520 acres have been condemned on Mt. Tamalpais.

The federal government offered to find homes for four San Luis Obispo County Indians who are about to be evicted from land upon which they have lived for many years and claim as their own. Mrs. red Iverson, Indian commissioner at Paso Robles, announced the receipt of instructions from Washington to provide for the Indians, Jose Bylon, 60; Mary Roses, 65; Kleno Hill, 50, and Roman Roses. The Indians have fought fiercely against eviction, declaring they would rather die than leave their homes.

Fees collected by the county recorder at Stockton during 1929 showed an increase of $332.15 over 1928. Instruments recorded in 1929 aggregated 19,605 as against 18,647 for the previous year.

Petitions for the consolidation of Lone Tree school with Palermo district school have been circulated in the two districts. Lone Tree school burned recently. Incendiarism was suspected.

Los Angeles will be host to 100 conventions during 1930, a recent chamber of commerce report stated. This represents a drop of 31 from the number of conventions held there in 1929.

Appropriations of nearly $2,500,000 for hospital and other construction at five of the branches of the National Home for Disabled Soldiers will be sought of Congress during the current session, according to word received by Dr. A. C. Carlton, California chairman of the American Legion's rehabilitation commission. The hospital facilities of the national homes, including those at Sawtelle in southern California, are becoming of more and more importance, according to Dr. Carlton.

The Southern Pacific Company was recently authorized by the Railroad Commission to construct a main line track at grade across the Madeline-Alturas highway near Madeline, Lassen County.

Stockton Wharf and Warehouse Company was authorized by the Railroad Commission to lease to Lawrence Warehouse Company the warehouse of the former in the city of Stockton for two years, and Lawrence Warehouse Company has been authorized to operate the same under its own tariffs.

Upon request of applicant, the Railroad Commission dismissed the application of San Joaquin Light and Power Corporation for authority to issue and sell $2,000,000 par value of its common capital stock to Western Power Corporation.

LARGE CAGERS ON WOLVERINE COURT

Only Four Players Are Less Than Six Feet Tall.

Michigan's basketball team again this season gives observers an opportunity to dub the Wolverines "giants."

Of the 14 men Coach Veenker has retained on his varsity squad only four are less than six feet tall. Six men stand above the six foot mark, while four are an even six feet tall.

If Coach Veenker should pick Norm Daniels, sophomore forward, it is probable that every man on the team will hit the six-foot mark. Capt. Bob Chapman, who jumps center, is the second tallest man on the squad, being 6 feet 2 inches. Truskowski and Orwig, forwards, as well as Daniels, are an even six feet tall as is Lovell, guard. Jones, sophomore guard prospect, is an inch taller than his rival, Lovell.

Henry Weiss, sophomore forward from Cleveland, is the midget of the squad. He is 5 feet 7, the same as was Danny Rose, star floor guard of last winter. Weiss, however, stands a fine chance of breaking the monopoly of the six-footers.

The three men besides Weiss who are less than six feet tall are Kanitz and Downing, forwards, and Hudson, guard. They all stand 5 feet 10.

Torrell, sub center, is the tallest man, 6 feet 2½ inches. Dougall, another center, and Jennett, guard, are an inch shorter. Ricketts, another guard, is 6 feet 1.

An indication of what the recently authorized additional playing strength will mean to National Hockey league teams is seen in the acquisition by Montreal Maroons of Bill Phillips, flashy center of the Vancouver professionals, who was sold by the Coast club to Windsor, Ontario, for $10,000, and resold for the same figure to the local team.

Maroons will now send into action three complete forward lines, all with real merit. They will consist of Stewart, Siebert and Hooley Smith as regulars; Phillips, Trotter and Ward as seconds and Phillips, Northcott and Robinson as thirds.

Eddie Wittmer, star halfback at Princeton, is captain of the basketball five. Vogt, Carey and Bennett are other football regulars to make the court team.

Representative Ham Fish, who is racking his brain to find a way to bring the Army and Navy together in football again, always put a lot of color into all that he did at Harvard. He was a wizard receiver of a forward pass, even going to the extreme of catching them sitting when need be. His unusual height gave him a valuable reach aloft and he could pick the low ones off the ground. In the law school he put in his spare time organizing teams of former Harvard and Yale players for games.

Jane Bell of Toronto, a member of the Canadian women's Olympic track team in 1928 and winner of many national and international honors, has decided to give up running. The announcement of her retirement came through Myrtle Cook, another Olympic star. Miss Cook, who is forming a team to compete in the Millrose games in New York, said Miss Bell had refused to join the team because she was retiring from the track.

The French Tennis Ranking committee issued a new list for the 1929 campaign, with Henri Cochet and Rene Lacoste grouped together in first place. Jean Borotra was third and Christian Boussus and Jacques Brugnon were tied for fourth.

In the women's ranking, Mme. Mathieu was first, followed by Mme. Lafaurie, Mme. Bordes and Mme. Cleinadel in that order. Mesdemoiselles Barbier, Neufend and Metaxa were together in fifth place.

Foreign boxers—including Americans—must pass the joint scrutiny of Labor Minister Margaret Bondfield and the British boxing board of control before getting work in Great Britain.

Miss Bondfield revealed as much in the house of commons when she said she always consulted the board before permitting foreign boxers to enter the country.

The move was designed, she said, to "prevent the entry of boxers of no repute who will only undertake minor engagements which could equally well be filled by British boxers."

Yale's basketball coach, Elmer Ripley, was generally conceded to be the most consistent four shooter in the professional ranks a few years back.

Maury Kent of Northwestern tells this one about "Doc" Spears, the Minnesota coach. It occurred during Spears' first year at West Virginia. Spears' eleven got off to a good start in one of its biggest games when it returned the kickoff 25 yards. On the first play, however, something untoward happened and the referee penalized the West Virginians 15 yards. Another penalty of half the distance to the goal was soon inflicted and a third followed, putting the ball on West Virginia's one-foot line.

This was too much for Spears. He hurried out and without hesitation acquainted the referee with his opinion of him. "Get off the field or I'll penalize your team again!" barked the official.

"Where to, brother, where to?" came back Spears.

Home Has More Danger Than Savages of Brazil

John J. Whitehead, explorer and lecturer, with a Jungle Warrior

JOHN J. WHITEHEAD, explorer and lecturer, has just returned from eight months in the jungles of South America, where he was searching for traces of the lost Colonel Fawcett and his son.

Dangerous as he found the jungle, he encountered a worse danger at home. But let him tell it.

"One of the great problems of a trip of this kind is keeping in healthy condition. When we started, some of the members of the party had laxatives with them, but made wise by experience I carried Nujol. All too quickly my stock ran out. Soon I was in bad shape—what with a diet of rice and beans, lacking vitamins and green vegetables.

"When we finally got back to civilization, entertained first in Brazil and later in the United States, I became positively ill. Severe stomach pains and poor elimination made me realize that Nujol would again prove the reliable, trusty keeper of health. Sure enough, with the first bottle the trouble disappeared.

Don't think Nujol is a medicine. It is as tasteless and colorless as clear water. It brings you, however, what your body needs like any other machine—lubrication. Just as a good bath washes our bodies clean, Nujol sweeps away, easily and normally, those internal bodily poisons (we all have them) that make us feel dull and headachy and sick. Nujol cannot hurt even a little baby; it forms no habit; it contains not one single drug. Doctors and nurses use it themselves and tell you to use it, if you want to be well.

Take Nujol every night for two weeks and prove to yourself how happy and bright and full of pep you can be, if your body is internally clean. Get a bottle today at any drug store. It costs but a few cents, and makes you feel like a million dollars. Start traveling the health-road to success and happiness—this very day.

AFTER TEN YEARS

The end of the first decade of national prohibition is marked by one of the most bitter controversies concerning enforcement in the history of this great problem.

Denunciation of the present enforcement personnel by Senator Borah—himself one of the staunchest of the drys—has been met by a spirited defense by heads of the prohibition unit. Criticism of Peresident Hoover's law enforcement commission has also been voiced by Senator Harris and others, who demand that hearings of the commission be held in open session, and that reports of the commission's progress be made to Congress and to the public.

Differences of opinion have likewise arisen among prohibition advocates regarding Senator Shepard's bill which would make the purchaser of liquor equally guilty with the seller. Some favor the proposal, while others contend that its adoption would make convictions more difficult, as both buyer and seller might refuse to give testimony on constiutional grounds.

There is no doubt that this clash between leaders of the dry forces is looked upon with a cetain degree of satisfaction by the avowed wets.

Much oratory on the subject of prohibition seems certain to be heard in Congress during the present session, and a drastic shake-up in enforcement circles may occur soon.

The unbiased observer must be convinced that in spite of claims and counter claims by wets and drys, prohibition is still a very live issue in American politics, and is likely to remain so for quite a while.

Admiral Byrd's style is somewhat cramped by the fact that this old world has only two Poles.

BUSINESS IN 1930

Many expressions concerning the business outlook for 1930 have been published at the turn of the year, the consensus appearing to be that while there may be a perceptible slowing down here and there the general prospect is favorable.

One of the most conservative statements recently issued, and one which well represents the average opinion of business leaders is that of John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers. Noting that the pessimists are forecasting storms, while the optimists see only blue skies, Mr. Edgerton says:

"Taking a middle position, I can observe little on the horizon today to give us undue or great concern. Barring a few inevitable disruptions here and there, I believe the immediate future is safe."

Out of a large number of members of his association recently questioned, 69 per cent report an increase in their forces, while 91 per cent have increased wage payments, and 74 per cent are increasing production, as compared with last year.

There has been some slowing down in automobile lines, chemicals, furniture, iron and steel, and a few other industries. On the other hand, expansion on a large scale is promised in public utilities and railroads, an unusual program for the construction of public buildings, roads and other public works is announced by the government and various states, and sales efforts in practically all lines will be pushed with vigor.

From present indications 1930 should be at least an average business year, if not above the average.

Law violators are much alike in many disrespects.

AVIATION IN 1929

Several remarkable new records and a number of scientific advances marked the progress of aviation in 1929. Endurance flights with refueling in the air were among the most spectacular performances of the year, culminating in the record of the "St. Louis Robin," flying 420 hours and 21 minutes, or more than 17 days and nights before landing.

Willie Neunhofer of Germany set the world's altitude record at 42,123 feet. Mrs Phoebe Omilie of Memphis established an unofficial altitude record for women of 25,400 feet. Miss Elinor Smith set the world's solo endurance record for women by flying 26 hours and 20 minutes.

Captin Orlebar of England set a new speed record of 368 miles an hour.

A flight around the world by dirigible was made for the first time, with only three stops en route, by the "Graf Zeppelin," commanded by Captain Hugo Eckener of Germany. A German seaplane, the "Do-X." carried 169 passengers in a flight over Lake Constance.

Successful test flights were made by two British dirigibles, now the largest in the world, but these will be exceeded in size by an American airship now under construction at Akron, Ohio.

An airplane propelled by rockets was successfully flown in Germany; Lieut. Doolittle of the United States Navy made a flight and safely landing "blind," depending entirely upon instruments; a radio beacon was used to guide a pilot flying blind in the South Pole and he was made a rear admiral for his feat.

The year also had its share of disasters, but on the whole an advance in the direction of safety was recorded.

CIVILIANS START WARS

Civilians start wars; soldiers stop them. This in substance is the declaration of Major General W. G. Everson, chief of the militia bureau, who recently left the pastorate of an Indiana Babtist church to take his present position. He has served in two wars himself, besides devoting much time to the national guard of his state.

The general's remark was intended to be a reflection of the often repeated charge that military men are the cause of wars. He also said: "No soldier wants war, but it is foolhardy to think of disbanding our forces and giving no heed to preparedness."

It is true, as General Everson says, that decisions for war are made by civilian officers of goverments. The armies and navies only come into the picture after war is declared. It is only natural that military men, upon whom the responsibilities for ending war must fall, desire to have adequate personnel and equipment with which to combat the enemy when their civilian masters say the word. They also believe that preparedness is the best means for averting aggression on the part of other nations.

It may be that military authorities sometimes recommend a greater expenditure for war preparations than is necessary, but they do not advocate war itself.

TEN LYNCHED IN 1929

In its annual report on lynchings in the United States, the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama places the number of persons put to death at the hands of mobs during 1929 at 10. This is one less than in the previous year, and the lowest recorded since records have been kept.

Of the 10 persons lynched last year, three were white and seven were negroes. Florida was the scene of four lynchings. Texas had three, while Kentucky, Mississippi and Tennessee had one each. In 27 instances, the report states, mobs bent on lynchings were thwarted by officers of the law. Thus 12 white men, 20 negro men and two negro women were saved from death by mob violence.

The steady reduction in the number of lynchings during the past years is gratifying. The record of 1929 stands in pleasing contrast with the orgy of mob rule which marked the latter part of the last century. In the year 1892 no less than 255 persons were lynched, of whom 100 were whites, 155 were negroes. As late as 1919 there were 83 persons lynched in the United States.

How many innocent persons have been put to death by the most horrible means to gratify the blood lust of frenzied mobs will never be known. While most of those who have been lynched weer no doubt guilty of the offenses charged, it has been conclusively proved that in many cases mistakes have been made.

But, regardless of the guilt of a suspect, lynching is always an indefensible procedure, which has no place in a country that makes pretentions to civilization.

Telegraph messenger boys are being used to test the wearing qualities of shoes. But this will be of little value to folks who buy them to move around in.

Owing to a water famine at Epernay, France, motorists have been using wine to cool their radiators. Americans are seldom reduced to such desperate straits.

Wall Street short story: Broker, break, broke.

GREAT HOSPITAL PLAN

Many persons deny themselves needed hospital treatment because they will not accept charity, although they are unable to pay regular fees for proper medical care and nursing. To met the situation presented in such cases, a great institution to be known as the Gotham hospital is planned for New York City.

It is proposed to raise $6,000,000 for its establishment, one-half of which is to be devoted to the endowment fund. The fees to be charged patients will be as low as $3 a day. Such a hospital will be a great boon to the class of persons which it is designed to serve, and may lead to the adoption of a similar plan in other cities.

The work of raising the necessary fund will be begun at once under the direction of Matthew S. Sloan, general chairman. Mr. Sloan is president of the National Electric Light Association and of the New York Edison Company.

Among the prominent business men and industrial leaders who will be associated with him in the enterprise are General W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, both of whom agreed to head special committees.

Thus again is illustrated the humanitarian spirit which animates many of our great captains of industry, who are willing to take time out from their important duties to spend their energies and money for the benefit of those less fortunate.

SCOUTS TO CELEBRATE TWENTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The Boy Scouts of America will celebrate its twentieth aniversary next February 7 to 13, with especial emphasis upon its actual birthday date, February 8. The organization of Boy Scouts was started in England in 1908 by General Lord Robert Baden-Powell of Gilwell, the hero of Mafeking.

The purpose of the movement has been character building and citizenship training for boys through activities based upon the legends of knighthood, chivalry and the lore of the plainsman and of the Indian.

The imagination of boys was fired by the Baden-Powell program and three years after the movement got under way in England, the message of Scouting had spread to America. Here it has grown with great rapidity and today there are nearly 825,000 boys and leaders in the United States, who have as their principal aim better American citizenship.

Any one wishing to register may call at Mr. Stampanoni's store on San Pedro avenue, the most convenient hours being between 2 and 6 p. m., when Mr. Stampanoni is always on hand.

$200.00 PAID FOR ONE COPPER CENT

J. D. Martin, of Richmond, Va., is the proud possessor of a check for $200.00 paid him for an old copper cent. The Numismatic Company, Dept. 654, Fort Worth, Texas, who purchased this penny from Mr. Martin, says there are numerous old coins, bills and stamps in circulation for which they will gladly pay big cash premiums. So that you will know the value of old coins and stamps and what to watch for in your change, the Numismatic Company will send for only 4c to any reader of this paper who writes them, a large illustrated coin folder describing some of these wanted articles and the big profits to be made. Better write them today for this large folder so you can post yourself and know just what to look for. Remember that Mr. Martin's knowing the value of his penny meant a difference of $199.99 to him. Without knowing its value that penny might still be in circulation, passing through the hands of thousands until someone like Mr. Martin, who knows old coins, recognized its value. It pays to be posted. Send 4c now for the illustrated coin folder. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain.

New York will have an anti-noise campaign, in which the speak-easies will doubtless do their bit.

It would be interesting to check some tombstone inscriptions with the recording angel's ledger.

GROWTH OF CORPORATE FIDUCIARY IN CALIFORNIA

Estimating the recent phenomenal growth of trust company business in the United States, Albert A. Rosenshine, state superintendent of banks, in the January Banking Department Bulletin, states that approximately one-third of the developed wealth in the country is now under such fiduciary protection. Trust companies and banks with trust departments were named executors or trustees under wills six times as otten in 1928 as in 1923. The life insurance trust business, practically nil in 1923, is now estimated at over one million dollars at present in force. The State Banking Department estimates that the growth of trust company business in California has more than kept pace with the general development all over the country.

In California there are two kinds of trusts, court and private. A court trust is one which is accepted under appointment or order of any court, and as such is subject to the supervision of the state superintendent of banks. A private trust is one which is not, unless by special provision of the trustor, subject to such supervision because of the confidential nature of the business. The amount of court trusts has increased 40 per cent during the five year period from 1923 to 1928. Private trusts during the same period increased by 159 per cent. In the same five year period the number of court trusts administered increased 153 per cent, while private trusts showed a gain of 137 per cent.

In addition to the excellent character of California trust companies and their resources, the state law requires all trust companies to pledge securities with the state treasurer as a guarantee of faithful performance of their obligations. A recent survey shows that approximately $15,000,000 in approved securities are pledged with the state treasurer for this purpose.

Rosenshine believes that the further growth of the trust business in California is assured, and indicates that the many advantages to the public of this personal and uninterrupted fiduciary service are becoming more widely recognized each year.

THE HUNGRY BUREAUS

It is a chronic condition that the work of goverment and state departments, bureaus, commissions, boards and what not are "hampered for lack of sufficient funds," according to their reports.

We wonder what would happen if each of these innumerable tax-spending agencies were given "sufficient funds," according to the ideas of the bureaucrats in charge of them. Our guess is that half of the population would be on Federal, state and local payrolls within a year. One person out of every ten is on such a payroll now.

One needs only to read one or two of the current bureau reports which clamor for more funds to get an idea of the crazy research fads which are sought to be promoted and extended. For example, the Woman's Bureau lists a few of the "most important" subjects which a waiting world is dying to have investigated, as follows:

Surveys, studies and information concerning the employment of married women; employment in plants using poisonuos substances; investigation of the piecework system; a study of posture while sitting at work; a study of women in professional and semi-professional pursuits; the effect of fatigue on production and on of the best methods of making these investigations. These, the bureau says, are only a few of the great, vital problems. Dozens of others should have prompt attention if funds were available.

Then the results would be printed in great volume perhaps, and that would be the end of them. Of course, Congressmen might read them in order to get ideas for a lot of new laws requiring still more thousands of public officials and employees.

It seems that no bureaucrat ever investigated the effect of all this on the taxpayer's pocketbook.

FOUNDERS DAY BEING CELEBRATED BY WOMEN

Founders Day, January 17, is being celebrated California-wide by Federated club women in honor of the organizing of the California Federation of Women's Clubs thirty years ago in Los Angeles at the old Ebell club house on South Broadway. Then 6,000 women were represented. Today the number is nearing 100,000.

Many clubs will establish on this Founders day the penny a day savings bank plan proposed by Mrs. Robert J. Burdette, chairman of the General Federation Foundation Fund committee. A lively competition is existing among the clubs, districts and states in an effort to be among the first to complete their quota to the fund.

Wonder if Marion Talley will have to do a little singing this winter to raise next spring's fertilizer money.

An unconfirmed report says a baby was born in Hollywood in 1929.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS MEET IN LONG BEACH

Another big step in the state-wide unity program of the California Newspaper Publishers' Association was taken last week when more than 300 newspaper publishers of the state met for their forty-second annual convention at the Breakers Hotel in Long Beach, January 10-11.

Publishers from all sections of the state—Humboldt and Modoc counties on the north and San Diego and Imperial counties on the south—were present for the two day session of concentrated newspaper discussion.

Ford A. Chatters, Lindsay Gazette, was chosen president of the Publishers' Association to succeed Justus F. Craemer, Orange Daily News. Other officers elected were: H. R. Judah, Santa Cruz News, first vice-president, dailies division; Carroll H. Smith, La Mesa Scout, second vice-president, weeklies division; J. Sherman McDowel, Alameda Times Star, third vice-president, printers division; H. R. Ling, Burbank Review, treasurer; John B. Long was named general manager.

TWO KINDS OF BUILDING

Congress has already authorized appropriation of $248,000,000 for buildings throughout the states and $75,000,000 for structures to be erected in the national capital. It is estimated that an additional $175,000,000 will be requested during the present session of Congress. Only $1,500,000 is asked for by the bill, now pending in Congress, providing for the establishment of a national Department of Education, and this looks to the building of a greater American citizenship through the agency of the public schools.

"No sir-ee," Sam went on, too busy with his own ideas, I suppose, to notice my actions, which must have been peculiar, "if the murderer is still on the place, he is skulking around here in hiding. It is that strangler fellow, all right. I'll bet my last dollar on it. For some reason, he is trying to clean out the Canneziano family—all of them. I'll bet he told Martha to give the poison to Danny, not knowing what a child Martha was—or, maybe, knowing it. Martha, supposing the poison was candy, or something nice, ate it up herself. I tell you what, I'm going to do some proof hunting, now, on my own hook. If I find some stranger hiding out on this place, that will be good enough proof for Sam Stanley, and for any jury in Nevada.

"Of course, Mary," Sam went on, "it hasn't been so hard on you—not having to feel the responsibility the way I have. But I've come to the end of my rope. I'm going to use my own head, now. I've got to get an expert here, for one thing, to watch and guard over Danny. . . . Say, what's the matter with you, Mary? You look so funny. Do you feel sick, or something?"

"'Something,'" I said, "but, at that, I suppose it isn't near as bad as feeling responsibility."

If I'd stayed there listening to him for one more minute I'd have burst. I left him, and went running, like the crazy thing I was, up the back stairs to my own room.

CHAPTER XVI

The Puzzle

I stayed in my room for half an hour, thinking with all my might that I was thinking. At the end of that time, discovering that I had not turned out one single rational thought, I gave it up and went to find John.

John was on the porch, talking to Miss MacDonald. When I got close enough to them to see how he looked, I felt as if my heart would break for him. He looked, in spite of his tan, like death.

When I had reached the foot of the steps, both of them, without saying aye, yes, or no to me, got up and went into the house.

My legs were shaking under me. I had to go slowly up the steps. Neither John nor Miss MacDonald was in the living room when I got there. I went on into the kitchen.

Miss MacDonald was putting on her big apron.

"John knows, doesn't he?" I questioned.

"Knows?"

"I think that I know what you—"

"Don't!" she shot out at me, and I wouldn't have jumped any higher if she had shot a gun instead of a word.

"Don't," she calmed down and came over to me and spoke in a whisper, "say anything in here. Not anything."

"I've got to," I said. "I'm human. You listen to me." I whispered it, right into her ear.

I hadn't half finished what I had to say before she moved away from me; but she nodded her head, with those quick, short little nods that always mean confidential agreement.

For almost an hour I had been thinking that I knew it. That nodding of hers made me realize that I had only feared it; that I had believed that she could deny and disprove it.

I had planned biscuits for dinner. I went and got out the breadboard, and opened the flour bin, but I couldn't do it.

"I'm sorry," I said, and to my disgust I began to cry. "I guess you'll have to make out to do alone, for a while. I—I'm not feeling well. I'll have to go and lie down—"

Still blubbering and blind with tears I went upstairs, and bumped into Sam, standing outside John's door. I dried my eyes and saw that he was holding his six-gun, ready for shooting, in his hand.

"What is the matter with you?" I demanded. "What are you doing with that gun?"

"John is in there packing his valise. He says he is going to leave the place. I say he is not."

"Going to say it with the six-gun, if necessary, ugh?" I asked.

"If necessary, Mary. By G—d, he put it up to me, straight. He came to me, and said that he had to get off the place for a while. Had to. I baited him along. Asked him where he wanted to go. He didn't even try to hide his feelings. Didn't bother to make up an excuse. Said it was all the same to him where he went. When I reckoned he'd stay right here, he up with the idea of going down to [illegible] outfit. He's a fool; so he thinks that I am. Thinks I don't know he could get a good horse, the first night—"

"If John thinks you're a fool," I said, "he's paying you too much respect. I can't think of anything much worse, or more dangerous than a fool, but whatever it is, you are it. It turns me all over to look at you. Give me that gun."

I reached out and took it. His fingers didn't stick to it very long. I judged that he was not quite as eager to shoot John on sight as he had been pretending to be.

"Now get yourself away from here," I said. "Get on downstairs, if you know the way, and eat your dinner. I'll look after John."

"If you help that boy to escape—"

"Escape your foot!" I slipped into John's room, shut the door in Sam's face, and pushed the new bolt into its slot.

John was lying face down on the bed.

I went and sat on the bed beside him and put an arm around his shoulders.

"Mary?" he questioned.

"Yes. There, there now, John dear. Try to brace up—"

"You don't know!"

"Yes, I do know, dear. I know just what you know."

"My God," he groaned. "It is certain, then? I still had a little hope. I—I can't keep on with life, not after this. When I think of these last weeks— I— I'm filthy, I tell you."

"John, dear," I tried to comfort. "You didn't know—you couldn't. You aren't to blame. You are young—"

I knew that I had no comfort for agony such as his, but I could not bear to leave him; so I stayed, hoping, as I suppose foolish women have always hoped, that just plain, quiet loving him might help a little.

After a minute or two, he said, "Mary—if you don't mind, I—I've got to fight this out alone."

I went to my own room and lay on the bed. I was mortal tired from sorrow, and the hurt in my heart for John was sharp as a neuralgia pain, but my mind went working right along, independent of my feelings; straight on, like a phonograph, if somebody had started it, might keep right on grinding out a tune while the ship that it was on was sinking.

When Miss MacDonald came up, bringing me some dinner, which I couldn't touch, I said to her: "It seems true, but I know that it can't be. It is too impossible. I mean—too far fetched."

"Not a bit of it," she said. "The only impossible thing about it is the length of time it has taken us to discover it. Of course—forgive me, Mrs. Magin, I was almost on the trail once, I had at least started in the right direction, and then you threw me completely off."

"I! How?"

She smiled at me. "By seeing something which you did not see. But you are not in the least to blame for that. The fault is all mine."

She went and shut my transom. She looked through my clothes closet. She looked under my bed, saying, as she did so, "The proverbial practice of old maids, you know." She came and sat close beside me. "Now then . . . " she said.

"Listen. Bit by bit it works into the whole, like a picture puzzle—each segment slipping right into place. There is just one hole in it all, and I think your Danny's kindness and unselfishness will supply that necessary bit."

She began then—to use her own way of saying it—to put together the pieces of the puzzle. She was right. Bit by bit it fitted together. Almost at once she came to the place that she had called a hole.

"There is no hole there," I told her. "Under those circumstances, Danny would have been just sweet, and unselfish, and foolish enough to have done that very thing. She did it. That was why she was worried and unhappy, all that day."

"I'm sure of it. Now then . . ." She went on: Danny's calling after Gaby that day—easy to understand now, of course, and leading straight to Chad's suicide and confessional note. Gaby's fear; Martha's murder; Sam's ashes on the bag; Gaby's note to Danny; each one fitting right into place, until spread in front of me was one of the most hideous pictures that any human being has ever been forced to look at. In all my experience I have never investigated another murder case where the thing was so cruelly, vilely premeditated; so wickedly, cunningly carried out. If this is true, it will be, also, the first time that I have found a really brilliant mind belonging to a fiend."

"If it is true!" I echoed. "But it is proven. You have just proven it all to me."

She shook her head. "We have a seemingly perfect fabric made up, wholly, of circumstantial evidence. As yet, we have nothing else. Now I have a question to ask you. It will seem to you that I should have asked you this at least a week ago. I did not, because I was certain that, unless I shared all of my suspicions with you, your answer would be exactly the answer that you gave me before. Now, thinking as you think, I want a very careful answer to this question."

When she had asked it, I refused my first impulse to answer it, at once, and sat thinking carefully for several minutes. The answer that I was forced to give, then, made me sick with shame.

"No," I said, "I didn't. I thought, honestly, that I did. But now I know that I didn't. That—that," I knew I was chattering it, "puts Canneziano's murder right at my door—"

"Nonsense," she folded one of my trembling hands into her steady, capable hands. "We can't go poking about like that, into the machinery of fate, and stay sane. The blame in this case is entirely for me. But, if I had not allowed myself to be misled then, but had worked straight on, something equally tragic might have happened. We don't know. What we do know is, that no more time must be wasted.

"I have spent this past week in trying to obtain the necessary proof. I have failed. Now, I am going to ask you to help me. Will you?"

"If It Is True!" I Echoed. "But It Is Proven."

"I will, and gladly. But you'll have to tell me what you want me to do. I haven't the faintest idea."

She told me.

"Lands alive!" I said. "That ought to be easy."

I could see that she was annoyed. "I haven't found it so," she said. "I have made three attempts, as many as I dared make, this week, and have failed. Do you realize that it must come simply, and naturally? You must realize that—"

"See here," I interrupted, "why not do as Sam wants you to do? Why not arrest the criminal now, and force the proof, afterward? This sort of evidence could be gotten then, as well as now, and a lot safer, too, it seems to me."

"Mrs. Magin," she said, "until we have evidence of guilt we have no criminal to arrest. Incredible as it seems, we might still be wrong concerning every bit of this. I once made a horrible mistake. It was on my third case—that is, after I began to work for myself. I don't talk about it. I can't think about it. But I made myself a promise then, a promise that I have never broken, and which I never will break. Except in extreme necessity, proof, positive, and perfect, must come before any accusation or arrest in a case of mine. Twice, as I have said, I have had men arrested because of circumstantial evidence. Each time the evidence was far stronger than anything we have in this case. The first time, the man would have undoubtedly escaped if he had not been put in confinement. The second time was on my third case, which I have mentioned if you force me to make this the third time—"

"I can't force you to do anything," I reminded her, hoping to cool her down a bit.

"Yes, you can. If you go at this so clumsily that you give the thing away, and so endanger your own life, I shall have to force matters. I must, of course, risk a reputation—I'm not speaking of my own, you understand—in preference to risking a life—again I am not speaking of my own. But, if we are wrong in this, and remember we may be—circumstantial evidence is the trickiest thing in the world—it would be bitterly cruel and wrong. Will you remember that, when you make your first attempt?"

"But—how shall I do it?"

"I am going to leave that to you, and to your natural wit. You can do it much more spontaneously if you are not attempting to follow set directions. But do, do be careful. Don't make a mistake."

With that she left me. I am ashamed to say that excitement had made me forget my sorrow. I sat there saying my prayers, planning, and shaking in my shoes, for a good half hour before I could get up enough courage to go downstairs. In all probability, the next hour would bring me face to face with the murderous fiend; and not by the blink of an eye, not by the ghost of a shiver, must I betray my horrible knowledge.

When I finally did get myself downstairs, I found Sam, seemingly alone in the living room, playing solitaire. I judged, from the look he gave me, and from the way he had his shoulders hunched, that he was still in a right ugly humor.

"Where's everybody?" I asked.

"Out committing murders, somewhere, likely. Do you know how much I trust that MacDonald woman?"

"No, I don't know. I don't care, either."

"Ahk!" Sam barked. "She is head over heels in love with John, that's a part of what is the matter with her."

I said, "I wish I thought so."

"Why do you wish that, Mary?" It was Danny's voice. Her white face, with the big, sorrowful eyes, peeked around the high back of a chair near the fireplace.

I was too taken aback to answer her.

"How long have you been sitting there, eavesdropping, young lady?" Sam asked.

"I didn't mean to eavesdrop," she answered, quietly. "I am sorry. I was reading."

Sam, with his usual helpfulness in embarrassing situations, pushed back his chair and went walking fast out of the room.

"Mary," Danny questioned, "why aren't you my friend any more?"

"Lands, child," I said, "if you mean that because I was wishing Miss MacDonald was in love with John, it was only because I've always reckoned that the more women in love with a man the better for him. John loves you. What do you care how many women love him?"

"John doesn't love me any more."

"Nothing like that," I scoffed, and went into the kitchen.

She followed me. I went straight to the stove and picked up the lid lifter, which, as usual, when I'm not there to watch, some one had left sticking up in a stovelid to get red hot, instead of hanging it on the hook where it belonged. I dropped it with a howl; and, wrapping my hand in my apron, told her to run and get the linseed oil and limewater, up in the hall bathroom, for me.

I am not saying that I was not to blame. I do say that, if that fool child Zinnia had not jumped around shouting, "Sody! Sody! Wet sody's the best for burns—" and that, if Mrs. Ricker hadn't heard her screeching, and come in, too, and began asking questions, I certainly would not have overlooked the fact that, before she went to minister to my needs, Danny had picked up that lid lifter, from where I had dropped it on the floor, and, barehanded, had hung it upon its hook.

She made a quick trip upstairs and down again, with the bandages, and the lotion. She offered, sweet and sympathetic, to do up my hand for me. I had noticed, by that time, that my hand was not smarting much, but I was too excited to account for it reasonably. I asked Mrs. Ricker to attend to the bandages. I had another job for Danny.

"I just came out here," I said, "to make my weekly list to send to Telko for supplies. I can't write with this wadded up hand. Will you make the list for me, Danny? Zinnia, please hand her the pad and pencil from the shelf."

Zinnia brought it. Danny sat down by the table and picked up the pencil. My heart thumped in my throat.

"One crate of Fallon melons," I said.

Danny pushed the pad and pencil across the table to Mrs. Ricker. "Perhaps you'd as soon make the list for Mary? I have something to attend to upstairs."

"Go on, now you've started it, Danny," I said. "You write such a neat, pretty hand."

"I presume my writing can be read," Mrs. Ricker replied, as she picked up the pencil. "A crate of Fallon melons. did you say?" She wrote it down. I heard Danny running up the back stairway.

I felt flat as rolled dough from my disappointment. In the next minute I had something more than disappointment to bother me.

"I don't see," Zinnia said, "how you made out to burn yourself on that stove, Mrs. Magin. Miss Canneziano was out here, just a while ago, wanting to make some tea. The fire was dead out. She boiled the water on the electric plate."

I ran to the stove. It was as cold as winter time.

CHAPTER XVII

The End

I suppose it takes more than a minute for one's wits, particularly if they happen to be thick wits, to drain entirely away.

Before mine had completely left me, I had attempted to telephone to Sam, down in the outfit's quarters, and had failed to get a reply to my call. I had told Mrs. Ricker and Zinnia, trying with all my might to hide my fear, to run out and find Sam, or Miss MacDonald, or Hubert Hand, or John—I had forgotten that John was upstairs in his room—and to bring one or all of them to the house as quickly as possible. To this day I don't know why they went, without a question; but they went, running. It was the slam of the screen door behind them, I think, bringing with it as it did the realization of my aloneness and the memory of Miss MacDonald's warning, that turned me clear over to terror.

I shall not describe what I did, nor what I thought, during the time that I was alone there, downstairs, before help arrived. The humorously inclined might think such a description amusing. To me there is nothing amusing in the spectacle of an old woman being gripped and wrung by fright. I longed to run from the house; but I felt that I must stay there to explain the situation to the others when they came, if they ever did come, and to do my poor best, since I had made the fatal mistake, to prevent catastrophe. By clock time, it was only thirty-six silent minutes that I had to wait before Miss MacDonald came, alone and unhurried, up the front steps and into the living room.

Still holding Sam's thirty-thirty rifle in my hands—I had known that I could never use it to shoot at any living thing, but I had hoped that it might make me look dangerous—I turned to meet her.

"Don't point that thing at me," she commanded. "Put it down. What are you doing with it? What is the trouble here?"

Before I could answer her, Sam, Mrs. Ricker and Zinnia came clattering through the kitchen.

Mrs. Ricker was wringing her hands and saying over and over, in a voice all broken and mutilated with horror, "I have gone insane, I have gone insane. I have gone insane."

Sam said, "Gabrielle Canneziano just now waved at us from her window."

Miss MacDonald turned and ran like a wild thing up the stairs. Just as she disappeared from our sight the sound of a pistol's shot cracked through the place.

I followed the others. I ran up the steps. I stumbled down the hall, behind them, and into Gabrielle Canneziano's room.

I saw Gabrielle Canneziano, her cheeks painted, her lips reddened, long earrings dangling from her ears, lying on the couch. Over her breast was a widening spot of color, staining the fringes of the soft white silk dressing gown that she was wearing. On the floor was a smoking revolver.

John came. He said, "She told me what she was going to do. I allowed her to do it. I did not want Nevada to have to execute a woman."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Marks Birthplace of Father of Locomotive

At Wylain, on the north bank of the River Tyne, under the auspices of the Institutions of Shipbuilders and Mechanical Engineers, a tablet commemorates the birthplace of a man who achieved the seemingly impossible, George Stephenson, the father of the steam locomotive engine. Past the front of his cottage, within a few yards of the door, heavily laden and light trains of coal trucks pass today, as did the tiny chaldron wagons drawn by horses along plate-ways 150 years ago. The cottage itself is a two-storied house, typical of many of those built years ago by the colliery owners for their employees. It was divided into four rooms, in each of which a different family dwelt. The lower room at the western side of the cottage was the home of the Stephenson family, and it was in this room, which served for sleeping, eating and shelter, that George, the second son of a family of four boys and two girls, was born on June 9, 1781. "Old Bob," George Stephenson's father, was a Scotsman who crossed the border as a gentleman's servant, and then married a local lassie, Mabel Carr, the daughter of a dyer. "Bob" found work as fireman of the pumping engine of the Wylam colliery at 12 shillings ($3) per week.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Advertising Was an Art

Advertising a century ago was not without its subtleties, an ad which appeared then in the London Times would seem to indicate:

"(Advertisement)—Amongst the departures for the Continent on Saturday last we noticed the Dowager Viscountess Bolingbroke and suite. We were particularly struck with the elegance and superior convenience of her ladyship's carriage, which, upon inquiry, we found was built by Mr.—— of Uxbridge, who, we think, by producing such specimens of his taste, will bid fair to rival some of the first coachmakers in the metropolis."

Education in America

Compulsory education in the United States occurred first in Massachusetts. As far back as 1642 the selectmen were enjoined to compel parents to teach their children themselves or to procure teaching for them. The following list shows the dates at which the several states enacted compulsory education legislation: Massachusetts, 1852; District of Columbia, 1864; Vermont, 1867; New Hampshire, Michigan, Washington, 1871; Connecticut, New Mexico, 1872; Nevada, 1873; New York, Kansas, California, 1874; Maine, New Jersey, 1875; Wyoming, 1876; Ohio, 1877; Wisconsin, 1879; Rhode Island, Illinois, the Dakotas, Montana, 1883; Minnesota, Nebraska, Idaho, Colorado, Oregon, Utah, 1885-1890; by 1908 almost all states.

The Hard Part

Finding fault with the world is easy enough. Getting the world to pay any attention to you is different.—Des Moines Register.

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases; old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All drugstores today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

Finally Saw Pheasant

Hunters in the vicinity of Geneva, N. Y., had an experience with a pheasant not long ago. After a day's tramping in vain search of the birds the hunters sat in a club, bemoaning their hard luck. Just as one of the party had finished speaking there was a crash and the yarn swappers turned, to see a gorgeous cock pheasant flutter into the room as the last fragments of a broken window fell to the floor. The frightened bird ran across the room and out the open door. And no one did anything about it.

Some engagements end happily, but the majority end in marriage.

"Before My Baby Came"

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound puts new life into me and makes my work in the store and in the house easier. I took several bottles before my baby came and am always singing its praises to my friends. I recommend it for girls and women of all ages. It makes me feel like life is worth living, my nerves are better and I have gained pep and feel well and strong."—Mrs. A. R. Smith, 808 S. Lansing Street, St. Johns, Michigan.

A Sour Stomach

In the same time it takes a dose of soda to bring a little temporary relief of gas and sour stomach, Phillips Milk of Magnesia has acidity completely checked, and the digestive organs all tranquilized. Once you have tried this form of relief you will cease to worry about your diet and experience a new freedom in eating.

This pleasant preparation is just as good for children, too. Use it whenever coated tongue or fetid breath signals need of a sweetener. Physicians will tell you that every spoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia neutralizes many times its volume in acid. Get the genuine, the name Phillips is important. Imitations do not act the same!

Locusts Turn on Planes

Locusts recently turned on those who have been attempting to drive them out of India and Egypt. They have been attacking the airplanes, and have filled the radiators and engines so that the pilots had to descend to avoid overheating. One aviator who went up to scatter a swarm of the insects was forced down, and found that one of them had been drawn into the air-intake pipe.

Los Angeles Boy Needed Help

Leroy Young, 1116 Georgia St., Los Angeles, is a "regular fellow," active in sports, and at the top in his classes at school. To look at him now, you'd think he never had a day's sickness but his mother says: "When Leroy was just a little fellow, we found his stomach and bowels were weak. He kept suffering from constipation. Nothing he ate agreed with him. He was fretful, feverish and puny.

"When we started giving him California Fig Syrup his condition improved quickly. His constipation and biliousness stopped and he has had no more trouble of that kind. I have since used California Fig Syrup with him for colds and upset spells. He likes it because it tastes so good and I like it because it helps him so wonderfully!"

California Fig Syrup has been the trusted standby of mothers for over 50 years. Leading physicians recommend it. It is purely vegetable and works with Nature to regulate, tone and strengthen the stomach and bowels of children so they get full nourishment from their food and waste is eliminated in a normal way.

Four million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it. Always look for the word "California" on the carton to be sure of getting the genuine.

Gr-r-r

Eddie, age four, stood in the kitchen of his home watching his mother prepare the evening meal. For several minutes he watched the proceedings without comment, but when the potatoes were put on to fry he drew closer to the stove.

"Gee, ma," he said, "listen to those potatoes grind their teeth."

Hugged by "Gorilla," She Asks $302,300

Los Angeles, Calif.—Embraced on Broadway by a man costumed as a gorilla, Mrs. Hazel Pasley asks for $302,300 damages in a suit filed against the Principal Theaters, Inc., and others.

The gorilla man was advertising a motion picture.

After her experience, Mrs. Pasley asserts, she suffered from delusions that hair like that of the gorilla was growing on her tongue and back and was confined to a sanitarium for weeks.

MARRIES IN FACE OF LIFE SENTENCE

Slayer Redresses Wrong to Former Mistress.

Buenos Aires.—Facing a life sentence for the murder and dismembering of his beautiful sweetheart, Virginia Donatelli, the young Argentine slayer, Julio Americo Bonini, has been married in jail to Maria Luisa Monea, a former object of his affection with whom he had lived up to his meeting with the Donatelli girl.

So great was the popular interest created by the finding, in the muddy backwaters of La Plata river of first, the torso, then the limbs and later and at a distant point the head of Virginia Donatelli, that a movement has gained headway with the press and the public for the restoration of the death penalty for murder which had long ago been abolished.

Young Bonini's action in embracing religion, in confessing his sins and in volunteering to marry the Monea girl not only has stemmed the tide of popular revulsion against him, but has gained for him an increasing number of friends who seek to find mitigating circumstances for his act in slaying the girl that he now avers won him away from the bride of his recent marriage.

Entire pages have been devoted by the Buenos Aires newspapers to the crime. The papers point to the irony of the Argentine marriage law which declares that "the woman has the obligation to live under the same roof with her spouse; and should she not do so, this may be demanded of her by statute."

Good Samaritan Saves Squirrel but Finds Woe

St. Louis, Mo.—As often is the case, William Hoffman's daily good deed netted him only grief.

Bill is a butcher and he was diligently wielding his cleaver when he noticed a squirrel peeking in the window of his shop. He dropped his cleaver and went in pursuit of the little animal.

Over eight fences went the squirrel and over eight fences went Bill. He picked up some clods of dirt to throw at the animal and aroused the ire of neighboring housewives when his clods soiled the weekly wash.

When the squirrel entangled itself in some chicken wire Bill was the recipient of deep scratches as he removed the animal. He took the squirrel home, where it escaped and hid in a hole in the ceiling. Bill had his face scratched and his nose bitten when he peered in the hole.

Hoffman attached a hose to the gas stove and turned the gas into the hole in the ceiling. In a few minutes the squirrel dropped to the floor and was put in a box.

Fresh air and the animal was soon revived.

And then Bill and the squirrel went for a ride in Bill's car, a ride which took them to Tower Grove park, where the butcher released the animal, which scampered for a tree, perched on a high limb, and chattered insultingly at Bill.

But Bill refused to draw a moral from the story and is satisfied that he saved the little animal from the perils of the city's streets.

"Corpse" Comes to Life When Police Show Up

Racine, Wis.—A "corpse" came to life here while Racine police were carrying the supposedly dead man in a bathtub to the station. A telephone call had requested the officers to call for the body of a man discovered in the tub, which was part of an apartment building that was being wrecked.

The police arrived, picked up the tub, and started to an ambulance when a startled man arose from the improvised stretcher and asked what it all was about.

His presence, he explained, was due to a tired feeling after an all-night party. He was employed at the wrecking job and desired to be on time in the morning; hence the use of the tub as a bed.

Woman Takes $5 Bill From Plate in Church

Fresno, Calif.—The collection plate came along in church and Mrs. Sophia Gleim took out a $5 bill.

In police court she admitted she took the money.

"It wasn't stealing," she said. "People saw me. I was going to pay the money back and $1 extra. I needed it, for my husband has been gone for two years and there are bills to pay."

She was given a suspended jail sentence, on condition that she pay back the money.

SAVORY RABBIT DISHES

There are few people who do not like the gamey flavor of wild things. However, the following recipes may be used for the tame rabbit as well. For those fortunate enough to have several rabbits on hand and wish to keep them for later use, the following is a good recipe:

Pickled Rabbit.—Prepare the rabbit as for roasting. Place in a stone crock or jar and cover with one pint each of vinegar and water, one onion (into which stick three cloves), two bayleaves, half dozen allspice, one dozen pepper corns, one dozen chili peppers cut into halves. Let the rabbit remain in this liquid for three days, turning it occasionally. Drain and stew it, or braise it. To braise it cut one-eighth pound of salt pork into slices to cover the bottom of the baking pan. Place sliced onion, carrot and turnip and celery over the pork. Lay the meat on this and dredge with seasoned flour. Cover and bake one-half hour in a moderate oven. Pour one pint of stock over the meat, dredge again with flour, salt and pepper. Cook very slowly closely covered for two hours or longer. During the last half hour cook uncovered to brown the meat. Serve on a hot platter. Strain a portion of the gravy over the rabbit and the rest; serve in a gravy boat. Keep the pan from the bottom of the oven with a grate or ring all during the cooking.

Belgian Hare.—Clean and split a hare, season with salt and pepper and lard with strips of fat salt pork across the back and the legs. Place in a baking pan with a small amount of brown stock and carrot, onion and celery cooked in a little fat. Baste the hare often with the stock in the pan and bake forty-five minutes. Add one cupful of cream, the juice of a lemon and one tablespoonful of cornstarch made smooth with cold water. Baste and cook twenty minutes longer, then serve the sauce, strained.

Broiled Rabbit.—Soak a dressed rabbit in salt water for three hours. Drain, wipe dry, and broil just like chicken until well done. Season well with salt, pepper, just before it goes to the table, adding butter if needed. Pour over the following dressing: Two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one tablespoonful of French mustard. Serve with apple sauce.

Good Things to Eat.

Seeded raisins are richer than the seedless variety which comes from a grape that grows without seeds. Raisins add much to various dishes, in both nutriment and flavor.

Raisin Float.—Mix two-thirds of a cupful of sugar with one tablespoonful of flour, add one and one-fourth cupfuls of boiling water, one beaten egg yolk, the juice and grated rind of a lemon, one cupful of raisins and a tablespoonful of butter. Cook until clear and smooth and serve on toasted, buttered bread.

Roast Pork With Apple and Date Stuffing.—Take one pint of bread crumbs, one cupful of tart apple chopped, one cupful of dates cut into small pieces, one tablespoonful of minced onion, one-third of a cupful of celery cut into bits, one teaspoonful of salt, pepper to season, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter and water to moisten. Mix well and place the stuffing around the pork. Brown, add hot water to baste and baste every twenty minutes.

Prune Sauce to Serve With Ham.—Brown one-fourth of a cupful of butter carefully and add three tablespoonfuls of flour, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a few grains of cayenne pepper, one bouillon cube, the grated rind and juice of a lemon, the grated rind and juice of an orange and one cupful of prune pulp, using the liquor in which the prunes were stewed. Mix all the ingredients except the fruit juices and cook well. Just before serving add the fruit juices. Pour hot over baked ham.

Dried Apricot Dumplings.—Wash and soak the fruit, then stew, adding sugar to sweeten. Roll pastry into rounds and place two tablespoonfuls of the stewed apricots on each round. Add a small piece of butter, press the edges together, brush with milk and dredge with flour. Bake fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve with cream.

Standard French Dressing.—Four tablespoonfuls of oil, two of vinegar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-fourth teaspoonful of white pepper. Curry powder may be added, lemon juice instead of vinegar and a half teaspoonful of powdered sugar. Various sauces may be added for piquancy, as one's taste dictates.

TRAVEL!

For hours they had been together on her front porch. The moon cast its tender gleam down on the young and handsome couple who sat strangely far apart. He sighed. She sighed. Finally:

"I wish I had money, dear," he said. "I'd travel."

Impulsively, she slipped her hand into his; then, rising swiftly, she sped into the house.

Aghast, he looked at his hand. In the palm lay a nickel.

Red-Haired English Cat Declared to Be Unique

A cat said to be the only one of its kind in existence was exhibited recently at the cat show at Croydon, England, by H. C. Brooke. Instead of one of the familiar cat colors of black, white, gray or ginger, this remarkable feline is dark red from head to tail, like a human head of deep auburn hair. Red patches or bands have been observed in other cats, but this is the only individual, Mr. Brooke asserts, in which the coat of hair is entirely red. Just how the red haired cat happened is not disclosed, although assurances are given that no chemical trick is involved, but that the animal comes naturally by its unusual hair.

The animal is a full grown male and shares the supposed quick temper of the red haired humans, being exceptionally inclined to bite and scratch. The red hairs are produced in the same manner as in human beings; that is, by partial deficiency of the black or brown pigment granules which give the colors to dark hairs, plus a relative excess of the other pigment which may occur in hairs, reddish or yellowish in color, and existing diffused generally through the substance of the hair instead of collected in granules.

Safe

Representative Pearl P. Oldfield, deploring the increase in automobile accidents, said at a dinner in Washington:

"I can sympathize with the woman who was rung up on the telephone in the small hours. Shivering with fright, she put the receiver to her ear.

"'Is that Mrs. Margaret E. Winslow?' said a very grave voice which she didn't know.

"'Yes, yes,' she panted.

"'Mrs. Winslow,' said the grave voice, 'I regret to have to inform you'—and it seemed to poor Mrs. Winslow that her heart stood still—'to inform you that your son, John Evans Winslow, has been arrested for joy riding.'

"'Oh, thank goodness,' shouted Mrs. Winslow, 'the boy's safe in jail.'"

New Road Test for Drivers

One of the most difficult and yet safest highways in the world has just been opened between Haugastol and Eidfjord, Norway. It is a masterpiece of engineering and is said to provide a thorough test of driving skill for autoists. High in the mountains, reached by long grades and through tunnels, a one-way road is controlled, eastbound autoists being compelled to start from certain points on the hour and half hour, and westbound machines must wait in designated places for their turn.

Pole-Rope Stretcher Made

Persons disabled while mountain climbing may be carried to lower levels in a stretcher made from a pole and a piece of rope, according to demonstrators at the recent travel show in Dresden, Germany. The rope is so wrapped and knotted as to provide a swing for the body suspended from the pole, the injured person being trussed into a comfortable position to be borne on the shoulders of his fellows.

Forehanded Cat

Miss Helen Currier of Canaan, N. H., has a black Angora cat that, for reasons best known to itself, is showing the hoarding instincts of a squirrel. The cat has brought up from the cellar nearly a bushel of apples which it places back of the living room stove. Lately this cat brought up a turnip that weighed one and one-half pounds.

Needless Pain!

Nowadays, people take Bayer Aspirin for many little aches and pains, and as often as they encounter any pain.

Why not? It is a proven antidote for pain. It works!

And Bayer Aspirin tablets are utterly harmless. You have the medical profession's word for that; they do not depress the heart.

So, don't let a cold "run its course." Don't wait for a headache to "wear off." Or regard neuralgia, neuritis, or even rheumatism as something you must endure. Only a physician can cope with the cause of such pain, but you can always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

Bayer Aspirin is always available, and it always helps. Familiarize yourself with its many uses, and avoid a lot of needless suffering.

Judge: "Where did the automobile hit you?"

Rastus: "Well, suh, if I'd been carrying a license number, it would have been busted into a thousand pieces.
